

City Network brings quality hosting to Argentina

With more than a decade of City Network quality hosting in Europe - a leap is made into Argentina and South America. City Network is launching a complete line of hosting services from domain sales and shared hosting to cloud servers. Our main focus is on Argentina but during the year there will be an expansion into other South American nations.

City Network has long been one of the cheapest domain registrars in Europe, whether it is a generic domain such as .com or .net but also country specific domains such as Argentina's .com.ar. This strategy will also be applied in South America where various domain names will be offered at our below cost. While the advanced domain- and shared hosting environment will appeal to private people and the smaller company – City Network's cloud computing- and dedicated environments will be at great benefit for larger corporations in Argentina.

City Network has hired a team led by Nicolas Lamanna who will take charge of local operations where services such as support and other communication will be focused. Nicolas has an extensive background in various online properties. City Network will operate out of Buenos Aires.

- Argentina needs a new player that brings high quality hosting at a reasonable price. For a long time we have seen prices at or higher than in Europe but lacking the quality or functionality. Our combination of a great place to register and manage your domains with high quality shared hosting makes us a very interesting choice. Nobody runs shared hosting using clustered and load balanced environments with the functionality we offer, says Nicolas Lamanna, Chief of operations in Argentina.
- South America in general is extremely interesting as a market. Hosting is something that is developing very quickly and will take big leaps forward over the next few years. We want to be there early and be ready to take a part of the market which we believe so much in. In addition we think we can bring new technology to South America which will benefit many, says chairman, Johan Christenson.

City Network is available from the main site of www.citynetworkhosting.com.ar and the cloud computing offering is found at - www.citycloud.com.ar using the brand City Cloud.
